WOMEN AT LUNCH.

Studies of Feminine Fancy in Chicago Tes Rooms and Refectories. There are queer studies in wonankind among the hungry crowds at luncheee | which compose that mighty ocean? Of in the "tea rooms" and "refectories" of Chicago's big shops. There are men case is sufficient to show its absurdity. there to be studied too, but they are as | But the improbability that the arden a rule solitary, stranded specimens and | naturalist would secure the prize in the do not affect the general feminine as | way I have described is not one whit peet. That aspect as a whole is, if one will only notice it, a curious, incessant quiver. A like number of men seated at luncheon keep their shorn or bald heads almost still, but the comparison of woman to the "light aspen shade" was never so true as in one of these assemblages of bonneted ladies, whose sigrettes and ribbons and curls seem in a perpetual breeze as they shake their heads at every assertion they make and turn twenty times to see if their especial waitress is coming at last.

The extreme heartiness of the luncheons taken by the more fragile looking of the women is striking. It is the large and well nourished dame who seems content with coffee and rolls or tea and fried cakes. At the Women's exchange the other day omethis it has of two slim and slender damsels seated tables laid for four covers, though they are no bigger than an "extension are doubtless meant for the luncheoneaters who keep within a fifteen-cent limit and consequently do not order many courses. There was already at the table a shy little woman who had 2,473,32 whispered a wish for bouillon and crackers, and a lover of strawberry shortcake who put up with her portion being served in a soup-plate because it .Fi01,083,45 pretty. These delicate maidens gave not one order, but three sent rate ones. $11,100.00 At first they had two kinds of soup, sorts of croquettes, bread, rolls and mashed potatoes. That almost covered the table, and the small, shy eater of crackers drew her plate nearer her cup. Then they sent for tomatoes, lettuce, salads, pickles, coffee, pie and chocolate. The dishes had then to be arranged in two stories. The shy woman looked as if she thought she ought to do something about the situation but couldn't. The strawberry shortcake eater having but one lone plate felt no responsibility. But when a third edition appeared with ice cream and little It was at a table in the restaurant of a certain dry goods shop famous for both silk and clam broth that a mother and daughter were placed by the wonderfully energetic forewoman. The daughter was large and looked domincering; the mother was small and looked meek. They were on their way to the exposition, and they agreed they must have a hearty lunch. "What will you take?" asked the younger. "Some clam broth?" The capped with the same metal.

"Have some chicken salad, then? That's two or three dishes in one. "No, I don't like chicken salad. It's awful mussy stuff, seems to me." "Well, would you like some strawberry shortcake, then? It looks good."

"No, I don't like any shortcake unless I make it myself." Well, mother, what will you have?" the imposing but dutiful daughter asked with a sigh of exhaustion. "I dunno but I'll take a piece of ap-

As the drop is to the Atlantic ocean so is the sphere we have been trying to conceive in the boundless extent of space. As for as we know, it would seem that there could be quite as many of such spheres in space as there are drops of water in the Atlantic Ocean. And, in all probability, these other spheres throughout space are tenanted by stars, systems and galaxies just as grand in themselves, just as imposing in their collocations, and just as overwhelming in their myriads as are those which lie within that one particular sphere which alone we know anything with certainty

Suppose that in the wide extent of the Atlantic ocean there was one indicharacter; I do not mean one species with its myriad individuals, but one north or south Atlantic ocean at some depth or other from the surface.

Suppose that absolutely nothing further was known as to the whereabouts of this individual object, it might, for anything we could tell, lie beneath a mighty ice floe in the Arctic regions; it might be miles deep in the Caribbean sea: it might be basking on the surface in the equatorial regions; it might be tossed in the surf on the shores of St. Helena; it might be floating at the mouth of the Amazons; it might be off the Cape of Good Hope, or amid the but feel anger, and regret that they and where their rapid destruction is certain; that remaining where those serves to mark the spot where the great temple stood, and makes one dream dreams of what scenes and persons in the world's story it must have looked down upon, from earlier days than those when Joseph the Patriarch came to wed the daughter of the priest here to even later than when its shadow must have failen upon another Joseph and Mary his wife bearing the child water. Those at Alexandria had been re moved before that great event, but it would have been far more "scientific" and shown far better taste to have sent them back for future ages to value on their original sites than have taken them to lands where they must rapidly crumble to dust. There can be no possible excuse made with that gone to New York; the only palliative with regard to ours on the embankment is the forgotten fact that it was presented by the Egyptian government to commemorate our triumph over France. That at New York is now alated, as that on the Thames bank will be in another twenty years.

Trieste laid some claim to the American one. Its erector, as that of the one on the embankment, was Thothmes III., about three thusand five hundred years ago, and, like all the rest of them, it once had its surface highly polished and the hieroglyphics perhaps inlaid with silver gilt, and its point rose seventy feet in the air its apex caught the first glance of the sun god "No. I don't like clam broth. It's Ru as he rose over the Arabian desert, and then the smooth sides would glitter, and from obelisk to obelisk would the bright glances flash as he rose in eastern rule.

Think of this, and then look at those sad, wasted, crumbling monuments in London or New York and ask if wisdom be justified in such ruthless and greedy children as possess them. There was a scene which took place at their feet as they stood before the palace pylon of Alexandria, which all know but few associate with them, and yet the saidly-thrilling tale of the death of Hypetia is familiar enough. Nice Hypatia is familiar enough.-Nine-

OLD-TIME RIVER TRADE. Everybody Used to Depend Wholly on

Steamboat Transportation. One of the most difficult problems is the present position of the river toquarter of a century ago, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, it was every thing. It was both the feeding and distributing artery. People engaged in building, locating for life, could see prosperity only near its waters. Advised that business would soon be going west they could only respond by the question: "Do you see that river? Is it going to move?" Created arenues of trade were just beginning to receive attention, due to the rivalry of other with a natural highway. The possession of this nature-given avenue of commerce had, in fact, made the average St. Louisian neglectful and disdainful of the created avenue. Life that did not begin and end on the river was not worth talking about. man who wanted to go to Cairo, Memphis, Vicksburg or New Orleans never thought of rail. The paintial river steamboat was the accepted means of travel. People going cast, even, at one time took a river steamer to Alton. tenths of the life and notivity of the city. The "runner" was the most persistent and irresistible of his class. He hotel. He would almost kidnep a per son to get him to his steamer or to his hotel. The latter-day cobman is nothwith the merchant who had a pound or a ton of freight to ship. It must go by river-by boat or barge. Those were great days for St. Louis Railroading was undergloped in the west and southwest and northwest and
